Woodley Park News

WPCA's fall meeting on Monday will feature Scott Einberger discussing his book, A History of Rock Creek Park: Wilderness and Washington, DC. We will also hear a report from Ryan Wegman, the Executive Director of Friends of Woodley Park, an organization that "promotes urban renewal and investment in Woodley Park's commercial centers, to ensure economic stability for its businesses and a safe, beautiful dwelling for its people." October 30, 7:30 pm at Stanford. The agenda for the meeting, along with the President's report on the past year's activities, are on the website.

Finally, the meeting will include elections of WPCA officers and other Executive Committee members. Officer candidates so far are Carolyn Abbey (President), Jeff Myers (VP), Warren Gorlick (Secretary) and Emily Curley (Treasurer). Bill Kummings, Katie MacFarlane and I are running for at-large positions. Nominations may also be made at the meeting.

The WPCA Board wants to know what you, the organization's members, want from the Association in the coming year. Let me know if you have any thoughts.

The next Meet Your Neighbors Happy Hour will be at LiLLiEs (2915 Connecticut Ave) on Tuesday November 14th from 6 to 8 pm. Complimentary appetizers provided. RSVP here.

The WPCA Board wrote to National Zoo Director Kelly about the Zoo's evening closing of the bike path through the Zoo, forcing riders to use the narrow sidewalk through the tunnel. Board members spoke with Director Kelly this week and will continue discussions to try to work out a solution.
